Re: Capital Trust Holding AG vs. Rainmaker International, Inc.
Docket No. 07 Civ. 7318

Your Honor:

We represent the plaintiff in the above-referenced action, which has been stayed pending arbitration between the parties. In addition, on October 24, 2007, the Court "So Ordered" a stipulation pursuant to which defendant was to transfer 3.4 million shares of stock to this firm in trust for plaintiff. A copy of the stipulation and order accompanies for the Court's case of reference.

The shares have not been transferred. The account was opened and the delivery instructions were sent to plaintiff's counsel on October 23, 2007. Rainmaker counsel has more than once passed on supposed assurances that the transfer would happen by a certain date, the latest of which was today, but none has happened. Plaintiff needs to act to protect its rights in this situation. Rainmaker has claimed it is not responsible for nonfeasance or misfeasance by its brokers, but this fails to address its responsibility under the order to see that the transfer is accomplished. While a contempt proceeding should not be begun lightly, it appears to be plaintiff's only remedy, with the possible additional option of seeking a modification of the order to name defendant's brokers directly as Rainmaker's agents so as to eliminate the excuse that Rainmaker believes currently exists.

In addition to plaintiff's interests, the Court's own interests are at stake. Accordingly, we would be most grateful for any guidance the Court might provide on the proper method of
